ICEHOTEL

4.1.

All hotels have to be renovated from time to time but Sweden's ICEHOTEL in Jukkasjärvi is completely new at the beginning of each December. As the name suggests, the hotel is made from ice blocks, so it melts in spring. As a result, next year it has to be constructed again.

4.2.

In 1990 an exhibition of ice art was organised in a big igloo built near Jukkasjärvi. One night there were no free rooms in hotels in town, and some visitors asked for permission to spend the night in the exhibition hall. They slept in their sleeping bags on top of reindeer skins. That's when the organisers thought that a hotel made of ice could be built in the area.

4.3.

In order to make sure there is enough ice, 5,000 tons of ice are taken from the Torne River in winter. Then, the ice blocks are transported to a giant building in Jukkasjärvi, in which the temperature is -5°C all year round. The ice is kept there until the building process starts.

4.4.

In November over a hundred people, half of them artists, the other half professional builders, come to the region to construct the beautiful structure. They're all determined and spend days and nights trying to finish the hotel in six weeks.

4.5.

There are 65 rooms, singles and doubles, of different standards. Some guests choose luxurious suites such as a deluxe room called 'Song of Lotus', which includes a sauna and a relaxation area but there are also cheaper rooms where tourists sleep on ice beds with reindeer skins on them.

4.6.

The temperature may differ from room to room, but it is usually lower than -5°C ! That is why guests are advised to use their own thermal sleeping bags and wear gloves and winter hats at night. There is no kettle in the room, but if you have a thermos flask, you can get hot tea for free.

4.7.

The structure is the most ecological building you could ever imagine. It welcomes guests all winter and when temperatures rise, it simply melts into one giant puddle. Many different steps were also taken to limit the negative impact of the hotel on the beautiful natural surroundings, for example some energy-conservation and water-saving schemes were introduced.

MARMALADE

As a young boy, I was fascinated with cooking. Not with cooking food myself – I am usually terrible at it – but with the general act of preparing food, especially baking. I used to sit on the kitchen counter and watch my mother and sisters. Whenever they left a cake to rise or potatoes to roast, I spent hours lying on the floor watching the oven. I often wanted to help but they didn't let me.

I loved watching my mother make orange marmalade every Christmas. Oranges were not easy to buy and were only really available during the winter. My mother waited for hours outside the local grocer's for the first oranges of the season, together with half the neighbourhood population.

When I grew up, I lost interest in preparing food. Besides, my hospital duties and seeing patients didn't give me much free time. This all changed one evening in winter, around a week before Christmas in 1920. On my way home, I passed by the local grocer's, and that was when I saw a sign outside. 'Oranges in stock', it read. I stopped, and read the sign again. Marmalade was the only thing I could make with a sure chance of success, and I wanted to make something for Christmas. I immediately knew what I was going to buy. I paid for all the ingredients I needed, and I felt happy.

It took me a little more than a quarter of an hour to prepare everything. I measured out the sugar and water like a professional chef. I remembered my mother's recipe for marmalade, so making it was relatively easy. I was so proud that I didn't need any cookbook to prepare it.

When I was younger, I never waited for the marmalade to cool before I tried some. I always put a finger in it to taste it. This time, however, I waited until it had cooled. Then I tried some. It was exactly how I remembered and wanted it – a little mouthful of sweet sunshine. I repeated this over and over again, and each time it tasted as good as the last.

WHAT TO EXPECT AT THE STURGIS MOTORCYCLE RALLY

If you think that you are a true biker, then there is only one event each summer to look forward to, and it is the Sturgis Motorcycle Rally in South Dakota. This event started back in 1938, when the local riding club decided to organise a series of motorcycle races in the nearby fields. First, it was a small event with just nine races and few spectators, but then it gradually grew into a huge annual event. Every year, in the first week of August, it attracts hundreds of thousands of visitors to the sleepy town of Sturgis.

There are many other rallies in the USA, but a large number of motorcycle riders and enthusiasts choose the little town of Sturgis. During this time, the population of the town explodes from just over 7,000 to more than 300,000 people. The height of Sturgis's popularity was back in the 1990s, when more than 500,000 people came to town. Recently gas prices have gone up and it costs a lot to get to Sturgis and take part in the rally so the number of participants has dropped. This situation is difficult for the shopkeepers who sell their products to visitors. Yet, there are still lots of riders, including amateurs, who decide to come to Sturgis. Almost nobody travels there by car. They choose to get there on their own motorcycles. They say that the road may be long and very tiring, but the scenery and the exciting feeling of the wind in your hair make up for it.

During the rally, the main street of the town of Sturgis is closed to regular traffic. All you can see in the street during the first week of August is motorcycles. And the only sounds that you will hear during the rally are those made by motorcycle engines. But even though there are so many big motorcycles in the town centre, the Sturgis Motorcycle Rally is quite safe. There are plenty of security guards and traffic wardens who walk around the town and keep the peace while families with children enjoy a unique holiday there.

One of the most important races is the Mayor's Ride. The Mayor opens the race and then people can join him on a ride to Mount Rushmore. The participants of this race must first register and pay a fee of $160, and only 250 riders are allowed to enter. There have been complaints about limiting the number of riders, so the organisers are thinking of expanding the number in the future. All the profits from this ride go to Sturgis Fire Station.

In Sturgis you can also see and buy motorcycles from all the famous motorcycle brands. And if you want to escape the heat, there are lots of bars all around town where you can relax. In the evenings, you can leave the town and go to the Black Hills region for concerts of famous rock bands. Not very far from the Black Hills there is a big campsite, so you can rent a tent and stay there overnight if you want. There are so many things to do during the Sturgis Motorcycle Rally that seven days might be too short.
